ROUNDUP

Progress to Celebrate this Summer

The beginning of summer brings much to look forward to — warm weather, activities with family and friends, and hopefully some well-earned time away from work for us all.

This June, though, it is worth pausing to reflect on the progress around us that is the result of our organization's commitment and focus over the past several years.

This month, we have celebrated LGBTQ+ Pride Month by sharing staff spotlights and listening to how they honor and serve as advocates for the LGBTQ+ community. Celebrating the many unique cultures and heritages that make up our staff and our communities has been a point of focus for our organization this year. Last year, we created the Office of Diversity & Community Health Equity as a new area for innovations and initiatives that support diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging at our health system — for our patients, for our communities, and for our staff. In addition to leading our cultural and heritage celebration months, that team, led by its chief Rani Morrison, is supporting strategic diversity initiatives throughout our organization, such as improving our race, ethnicity, and preferred language data capture in Epic; reviewing and updating hospital policies and procedures with an equity focus; and supporting numerous initiatives aimed at ensuring our staff at all levels reflect the communities we serve.

We also recently commemorated the Juneteenth holiday, memorializing the emancipation of enslaved people in the United States. Juneteenth reminds us that part of our work to increase diversity, equity, inclusion, and belonging at UI Health is acknowledging the inequities of our past and working to eliminate injustices that remain in society today.

These changes at our organization are significant and notable because they are part of how we have refocused and recommitted our actions to being a more diverse, inclusive, and equitable health system — as providers of care, and as an employer. However, feedback from our recent Engagement Survey points to areas within our work environment at UI Health where inequities persist. We must continue to work to improve diversity, inclusivity, equity, and belonging at our organization.

But our biggest achievement of note, literal and figurative, is the Specialty Care Building (SCB). We're just three months away from opening this new, 200,000-square foot, state-of-the-art facility that will help us provide more and better care to our patients and communities. It truly has taken the work and sacrifice of us all to get here. With our collective focus and determination, we have made the operational and clinical adjustments needed to bring online a new, cuttingedge care space. The new expansions to the SCB also will help us better utilize our existing clinical areas. It will benefit everyone — especially our patients.

And although I am proud of these accomplishments, and this is incredible momentum, I would be remiss if I didn't acknowledge the areas in which we still strive to improve. Next month, you will see an invite for an Active Intruder & Safety Town Hall. This issue is top of mind and an obvious concern for all; thank you to those who have brought valuable input to this issue thus far. In July, we'll introduce the FY23 Goals & Initiatives and share information on Quality & Safety Transformation. Although these are challenges now, they are opportunities for our future.

Thank you all for your continued efforts. I hope all of you share with me the feeling of pride when you say that you are part of UI Health.

Celebrating LGBTQ+ Pride Month!

Inclusion is one of our core values at UI Health. This June, join us in celebrating Pride Month – observed each year in commemoration of the 1969 Stonewall Uprising.

Join us in recognizing and celebrating Pride Month by hearing from staff LGBTQ+ advocates, learning about our inclusive care practices, and celebrating the people that help create diverse, inclusive organizations like UI Health. Learn more at Celebrate.UIHealth.Care.

Commemorating Juneteenth

Juneteenth memorializes the emancipation of enslaved people in the United States. Though the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863 freed enslaved people in the United States, it was not until June 19, 1865, after the end of the Civil War, that news of the Proclamation was delivered to the residents of Texas. In 2021, Juneteenth was named both an Illinois state holiday and a federal holiday.

This year was the first observance of the Juneteenth holiday for the University of Illinois System. This annual observance of this historic day will provide us with an opportunity for celebration and continued engagement and conversation toward eradicating racism and encouraging social equity.

UI Health is proud to honor the Juneteenth holiday and continue our celebrations of the cultures and heritages represented by our communities, providers, and staff.

New Campaign: UI Health 'Building a Healthier Future for You'

UI Health's expanding clinical footprint and community and patient commitment are featured in a new brand campaign running throughout Chicago.

A 30-second commercial (broadcast and digital television and radio) highlights how UI Health is "building a healthier future for you," including:

- Our focus on diverse, inclusive care teams to strengthen the bond we have with our patients and communities.
- Our mission to advance healthcare for everyone by increasing access to clinics throughout Chicago, including our new clinic at 55th & Pulaski and our new Specialty Care Building that will open this fall in the Illinois Medical District.

In neighborhoods like Pilsen and West Elsdon/Gage Park, out-of-home advertising highlights how UI Health clinics in those areas provide "expert care close to home"; in areas like the Medical District, the Specialty Care Building and new Hospital Welcome Atrium are showcased as ways UI Health is "building a better experience for you."

Keep an eye out for all of our ads — in English and Spanish — on billboards, the CTA, and where you charge your electric vehicle, and you can catch our commercial where you view or stream TV or radio, or on our YouTube channel. ■
